

Denser breasts may put black women at greater risk of breast cancer

A study presented at the annual meeting of the American Association for Cancer Research found that denser breast tissue was more common among black women compared with white women. Lead author Anne Marie McCarthy of Massachusetts General Hospital said breast density is linked with breast cancer risk. The findings were based on data gathered from about 2,850 women who received mammograms in 2010 and 2011. HealthDay News (4/20)
