

Study: Missing A Single Mammography Screening Exam May Increase Mortality Among Screening-Age Women.

Aunt Minnie (3/31) reports that research suggests that “missing a single mammography screening exam increases mortality among screening-age women, and missing two or more exams doubles the risk of all-cause mortality.” The findings were published in the American Journal of Roentgenology.