

Study Suggests Digital Mammography Finds More High-Risk Breast Lesions.

HealthImaging (11/21, Steere) reports a study published in the November issue of the American Journal of Roentgenology found that the detection rate for high-risk breast lesions for film-screen mammography “ranged from 0.21 to 0.64 per 1,000 mammographic studies,” while it was “0.32 to 1.49 per 1,000 mammographic studies for” digital mammography